

May 3, 2007

Noisette E-News, New Boardwalk Stresses Eco-Friendly Innovation

The replacement of the old seawall is gaining notice for its environmentally friendly construction. Using vegetation to provide a natural edge, broken concrete from the original structure was recycled as inner fill for the breakwater. "This is an innovative feature, which helps preserve the shoreline," says Noisette Company Director of Operations Art Titus.

Click here for the full story

Charleston Regional Business Journal

Affordable Park Circle Remains Hot Home Market, by Dennis Quick, April 16-29, 2007

The truth about Park Circle's renaissance is in the numbers, according to Business Journal Senior Writer Dennis Quick. In 2000, 48 homes were sold in Park Circle; last year, that figure ballooned to 112. North Charleston City Councilman Kurt Taylor says, "We're seeing new construction in parts of Park Circle that haven't seen new construction in decades." The City's Oak Terrace Preserve project, which will add 374 homes and town homes to this historic area, is contributing to the rebirth, reflecting a turnaround from the pessimism prevalent in the aftermath of the Naval Base closure in 1996.

Click here for the full story

Noisette E-News, Locally Produced Film Pumpkin Brown Debuts at Navy Yard, May 2, 2007, by Keith F. West

With a special advance screening of the locally produced, independent film The Song of Pumpkin Brown slated for May 18 at 10 Storehouse Row, the film's director Brad Jayne sees a collaboration of regional creative talent as the catalyst for the project. Jayne's film focuses on the life of 10-year old Pumpkin Brown, who is sent to Jenkins Orphanage in Charleston after the death of his preacher father. Brown joins the orphanage's once-great jazz band, which produced real-life jazz legends like Jabbo Smith, Freddie Green and Cat Anderson. The Song of Pumpkin Brown was filmed on a seven-day schedule in locations around the Lowcountry, including a scene filmed at the Navy Yard, depicting a Depression Era radio station.

Click here for the full story

GlobeST.com, Upclose: John Knott, by John Salustri, April 27, 2007

At the Urban Land Institute's national conference "Developing Green: Integrating Sustainability with Success" in Pittsburgh April 23, John Salustri of New York City-based real estate web service GlobeST.com interviewed keynote speaker and Noisette CEO John L. Knott, Jr. Throughout the ULI conference, developers and building industry professionals discussed the importance of emphasizing social programs in sustainable development. In this GlobeST.com exclusive, Knott makes a compelling case for the logic of socially-responsible development in a sustainable context.

Click here for the full story